We have just celebrated our nation's Independence Day. It is always a heart-warming holiday because it brings to our minds what a great gift freedom is, and how high is the cost to attain it. We are blessed as a nation to be celebrating our freedom since 1776. When we look at what is going on in the world today, many nations are still hoping if not struggling to attain this basic human need for freedom, planted by God in every human heart. As I was watching film clips of D-Day on July 4th, I felt my spirit beaming with pride and admiration as I watched the sacrifices men and women were willing to make to fight against tyranny, and win back freedom. Yet I also realized that I watch with equal pride and admiration the "battles" that many people in our midst wage in order to instill freedom: the parents who every day strive to provide guidance for their children by modeling what honesty and respect love for their neighbor means; the teachers and counselors who every day work so hard to teach their students how to have an open mind, so as to live in this world with tolerance and understanding for their neighbor – especially for those who are different from themselves; the public servants, civic leaders, police officers, firemen, and others who day by day work to develop policies and laws to help protect freedom. Most of all I have the deepest respect for those who work for freedom by devoting their lives to God, believing that all true freedom is based upon spiritual freedom. These are not only the consecrated religious, but all who pray for freedom; all who work at forgiving those who have offended them; all who strive to be loving and kind; all who put their neighbor's need before their own; all who willingly devote time, talent and treasure to help the less fortunate. All of these I see as modern "warriors" who hit the beaches of everyday life to win for God an everlasting place of freedom and peace. They fight against those spir- its such as greed, intolerance, selfishness and hatred that sabotage true human freedom. God bless all you heroes!! ~ Fr. John

Fr. John last Saturday officiated at an interfaith wedding for one of our parishioners at the Grace Episcopal Church. The couple during the ceremony took up a collection to be split between both churches. They also requested donations to our Food Pantry in lieu of gifts. In total, $5,375.00 was donated to our Food Pantry! We are grateful to Romeo & Elizabeth Melloni for their thinking of our parish on their joyful day. May the Holy Spirit bless them as they begin their new journey together.
